University of Toledo business students tomorrow will urge people to become organ donors at registration centers on campus.

The UT College of Business Administration is holding a "Donor Bowl" from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will have people in the Stranahan Hall lobby, Rocket Hall main entrance, and the food court in the Student Union registering others to become organ donors.

The effort is part of the Donate Life Ohio: Do It Now! campaign, which advocates for increased organ and tissue donors.

Nearly 3,000 people in Ohio are waiting for an organ transplant, with hundreds more needing tissue donations to improve their quality of life. Only half of Ohioans are registered donors, according to the campaign.

So far, UT has registered more than 4,500 new donors this school year as it moves toward its goal of 10,000 donors by the end of April.
