

COBI program set for minority, international business students

The UT College of Business and Innovation is presenting its first Minority and International Business Student College Orientation program on Friday, February 10 from 10:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Open to both COBI undergraduate and graduate students, participants will be able to discuss pertinent issues with a panel of faculty and students, as well as get to know each other in a relaxed environment during lunch.

“Our college has been exploring ways to further link minority and international students to each other,” said Kari Dilworth, COBI adviser/recruiter, “as well as to resources, programs and services throughout the college and the entire campus. We thought this special luncheon program would be an enjoyable and informative way to achieve these goals.”

The program is free and lunch will be provided, but advanced registration is necessary.
