The Advanced Seminar is designed to help students understand the issues involved in designing a research study in the field of higher education. There are a number of different types of research designs that are typically used in the field of higher education, including quantitative studies, qualitative studies, policy studies, and historical studies. The majority of students in the program choose to conduct either a quantitative or a qualitative study. In order to help them develop proficiency in designing both types of studies, students will be required to take two Advanced Seminars, one on how to conduct a quantitative study on the impact of college on student outcomes, and the other on how to design a qualitative study in the field of higher education. In order to develop requisite proficiency in designing studies using both paradigms, we are requesting that students be allowed to take two HED 8920 Advanced Seminars for credit.
