If the proposed course is similar to another course in the College or University, please describe the difference and provide a rationale for the duplication. (If this course duplicates material covered in another course within your department or college or in another college, attach a letter of endorsement from that area's dean and department chairperson indicating their support. Clarify the manner in which this course will differ).

While courses exist that focus on separate aspects of this course (e.g., communication, society, and psychology), this course is unique as it focuses on:

- a) psychological concepts and processes of news media perception; AND
- b) a news consumer (citizen/ learner) perspective; not a news producer (professional) perspective.

If the course is intended to meet a University Undergraduate Core requirement, submit a course syllabus and complete the following:

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Catalogue description

The course provides students with a theoretical and empirical foundation on psychological concepts and processes (e.g., critical thinking, personal epistemology, and belief systems), to understand the role of the news media (e.g., news print/ broadcast, social media, and media technology) for the public sphere, citizenship, democracy, and peace. In their area of studies, students will learn how to develop a competency-based news media literacy model that enables citizens to be/come critical and effective news media consumers.

Elaboration

The purpose of this course is to provide you with an opportunity to read and critically reflect on recent empirical and conceptual work on news media literacy, citizenship, and underlying psychological concepts and processes, thereby giving you a sense of the "state of the art" as represented by recent publications in the following major educational psychology and general education journals: Journal of Educational Psychology, Contemporary Educational Psychology, Educational Psychologist, Educational Psychology Review, Review of Educational Research, and the American Educational Research Journal and others. The articles represent a variety of research methodologies: empirical studies, review articles, meta-analyses, and conceptual articles.

COURSE ORGANIZATION & ASSIGNMENTS

A) Readings

On your own you are required to read and study the assigned chapters, journal articles, and other reading materials BEFORE they are discussed in the course (see below and Calendar). It is suggested to form small reading groups to study the materials.

B) Reflection paper driven seminar discussion

Learning involves the individual and social construction of knowledge. To encourage this active involvement on your part, you will produce reflection papers for ten (10) sets of readings during the semester. These reaction papers are best considered informal, but thoughtful and critical reflections and overall reactions to the assigned sets of readings.

What you address in your reflection papers may include, but is not limited to:

- 1) theoretical and/or empirical questions raised by the theory/research you read;
- 2) reflections on how the readings relate to preceding materials that you've read in this seminar;
- 3) reflections on how the information can be applied to your own area of professional interest or expertise;
- 4) reflections concerning how the information contributes to your personal growth as a learner, instructor, or researcher;
- 5) concerns about the methodology employed; and/or
- 6) ideas for future research on that topic

Do NOT provide summaries of the readings! The reaction papers are meant to serve as a "springboard" for you what you think and feel about the readings. Make sure to back up claims with reasons, experiences, and/or evidence to form proper arguments.

The reflection papers are to be prepared for the date on which the readings will be discussed in class. You will submit a paper copy during class. Late assignments will not be accepted.

Scope of the reflection papers:

EDP6370/ Master Students: Your reflection paper should not exceed two to three (2-3) double-spaced pages in length, excluding cover page (not needed!), tables, graphics, and references.

EDP8370/ Doctoral/ Ed Specialist Students: Your reflection paper should not exceed four to five (4-5) double-spaced pages in length, excluding cover page (not needed!), tables, graphics, and references.

C) Academic paper and its presentation

You will write an academic paper that is due the last week of class. The purpose of this paper is to provide you with an opportunity to “pull together” the empirical and conceptual work on news media literacy, citizenship, and underlying psychological concepts and processes (such as critical thinking, personal epistemology, etc.) that you have read throughout the semester AND to elaborate on area of your interest within the context of the course by adding new literature. The project paper, in contrast to the reflection papers, is formal in its nature: Use academic writing and follow APA style. You may work of a theme that you developed in your reflection papers and integrate your own area of expertise (no more than 50% of the paper’s content).

Furthermore, you will present your project paper to your peers during the last two weeks of class (see calendar). This presentation should not be longer than 7 minutes and not contain more than 7 PowerPoint slides.

Scope of the academic paper:

EDP6370/ Master Students: Your academic paper will be written using a typical essay style, including and introduction, a body with arguments/ issues, and a conclusion. It is suggested to an example to illustrate your essay topic at a more concrete level.

Your academic paper should not exceed five to six (5-6) double-spaced pages in length, excluding cover page (not needed!), tables, graphics, and references. You need to include three to four (3-4) references that have not been part of the course readings.

EDP8370/ Doctoral/ Ed Specialist Students: The academic paper can take any one of the following forms:

- 1) a mini-research proposal (consider this as practice option, if your major comprehensive exam includes a mini-proposal);
- 2) a short literature review;
- 3) an evaluation/critique of some educational or commercial program;
- 4) a set of guidelines for practitioner that are grounded in existing theoretical and empirical literature and is targeted towards a specific audience (e.g., elementary or secondary school teachers; instructional designers; the military); or

5) a set of guidelines for practitioner that you would need to get approved by me.

Your academic paper should not exceed ten to twelve (10-12) double-spaced pages in length, excluding cover page (not needed!), tables, graphics, and references. You need to include six to eight (6-8) references that have not been part of the course readings.

GRADING

Assignments

A.	Reading assigned reading materials
B.	Reflection papers (10 papers x 5 points)	50
C.	Individual Paper (1 x paper 40 points; 1 x presentation 10 points)	50
Total Points		100

Letter Grades

Over all you can score 100 points; 90+ points will equal the letter grade A, 80+ points will equal the letter grade B, 70+ points will equal the letter grade C, 60+ points will equal the letter grade D, and 59 or less points will equal the letter grade F, as well academic misconduct.

Other Grade related Information

Academic dishonesty. Any form of academic dishonesty will result in a course grade of F. (See University of Toledo, 2006, p. 29, for the Policy Statement on Academic Dishonesty.)

Withdrawal from the course. Student withdrawals with a grade of W can occur through 5:00 PM, Friday, of (a) calendar week 10 for the fall term, (b) calendar week 11 for the spring term, and (c) calendar week 4 of a six-week summer session. Not attending class or failing to withdraw during the appropriate time results in a course grade of F.

Incomplete grades. Incomplete grades (i.e., IN) are issued under extraordinary circumstances with the provision that the work must be completed by the end of the next academic year term. That is, an IN for a fall term must be completed by the end of the immediately succeeding spring term; an IN for a spring term must be completed by the end of the immediately succeeding fall term; and an IN for a summer term must be completed by the end of the immediately succeeding fall term.

Office of Accessibility. If you have “a physical or mental condition that substantially impacts [your] academic ... life” and you wish “to receive reasonable [academic] accommodations” (University of Toledo, n.d., Eligibility for accommodations section, ¶ 1), you must register with the Office of Accessibility, Rocket Hall, Room 1820 (Phone: 419.530.4981; TTY: 419.530.2612; Fax: 419.530.6137), if you have not already done so. Information shared with the Office of Accessibility is confidential to the extent consistent with State and Federal law. To become eligible for the availability of academic accommodations, individuals must (a) become established as students, (b) present an Office of Accessibility professional, and (d) complete an intake interview (University of Toledo, n.d., Procedures to access services section). Please contact me well in advance of the need for academic accommodations.
