The D.C. Internship

The Washington Center provides more than an internship. Through our program, you will engage in meaningful coursework and programming, expand your network, and transition from college life into your professional future.

The Internship

You can expect to work nearly full time at an internship that is tailored to your interests, skills and professional goals.

Gateway to Washington, D.C.

Spend a semester or term getting to know the nation’s capital. The following are just a few examples of the places you could go and the people you could meet through a TWC program.

- Meet with dignitaries at one of the city’s many embassies
- Enjoy a dinner or happy hour with fellow interns in Dupont Circle restaurants
- Learn about international development at the World Bank
- Take the Metro to Virginia and explore Old Town Alexandria or Arlington Cemetery
- Visit the Paralyzed Veterans of America for your civic engagement project
- Hear from prominent leaders through TWC's speakers series
- Discuss internship goals with your program advisor
- Expand your network at a National Press Club event
- Stay in shape with evening jogs on the National Mall
- Stay in shape with evening jogs on the National Mall

The Leadership Forum

Attend weekly events that include a speakers series, a career boot camp, a civic engagement project, a meeting on Capitol Hill and more.

Intern with one of more than 1,000 sites located throughout Washington, D.C., Maryland or Virginia
Experience

The Academic Courses
TWC courses range across many academic disciplines, and you'll select one that meets during one evening each week.

Networking and Social Activities
Take advantage of the countless opportunities D.C. has to offer after work hours and on weekends.

Throughout the semester you will develop a portfolio to document, analyze and reflect on your experience. The final product will provide impressive evidence of your accomplishments in Washington, D.C.

The Portfolio

The Portfolio

Many people are on hand to help guide, support and educate you throughout your experience.

TWC Program Advisor
- Helps you establish goals, organizes special programming and provides feedback on assignments.

Internship Site Supervisor
- Oversees your professional work, provides tasks and direction, and evaluates your performance.

Professor
- Teaches your academic course, facilitates class discussions and evaluates your academic work.

Internship Management Team
- Communicates with you pre-arrival, helps identify internship options and refers your materials to potential sites.

Student Services Staff
- Provide career advice, organize cultural and networking events and assist students with disabilities.

Resident Assistants
- Support you in TWC housing facilities and arrange social activities.

TWC Alumni
- Connect with you through networking events or social media and may provide future job leads.

Fellow TWC Interns
- Share the TWC experience with you, help you explore all D.C. has to offer and may become lifelong friends.
The Washington, D.C. Internship Experience

There's no better way to launch your career than with a professional internship. In fact, interning is becoming a crucial step in landing that all-important first job. These days, nine out of ten entry-level hires have completed an internship. So it's no surprise that the majority of undergraduates are making it a priority to complete an internship by the time they graduate.

But an internship is only part of the story.

One of the many things that make The Washington Center special is its unique integration of academics with real-world experience.

We offer a wide variety of classes to complement your internship. Academic coursework extends your on-campus learning and may help you earn credit from your home institution.

You'll also take part in our Leadership Forum, which is a structured set of activities that enrich your experience in Washington, D.C. It helps you understand leadership and the opportunity you have to contribute to your community locally, nationally and internationally.

It's all part of our educational philosophy. One that integrates professional work, coursework and special programming in an overall learning experience unlike any other.
The Internship Programs

Every Washington Center student selects a program that is led by one or more professional program advisors who counsel, supervise and evaluate their students. Program advisors also organize activities during the days or half-days when students are not at their internship.

We offer the following internship programs:

- Advocacy, Service & Arts
- Business & Global Trade
- Cordova Congressional Internship (students from Puerto Rico only)
- Ford Motor Company Global Scholars (students from selected countries)
- Governors (students from Mexico only)
- International Affairs
- Law & Criminal Justice
- Media & Communications
- Political Leadership
- Prudential Foundation Global Citizens (students from selected countries)
- Science, Technology and Society

For students with undergraduate degrees or graduate students not wishing to receive credit:

- Postgraduate Professional Development Program

The Internship

The Washington Center serves students in all majors, with interests in a wide variety of fields. These include the government, nonprofit and business arenas, as well as many others that may partially overlap with them—the worlds of media and communications, science and technology, law and criminal justice, and international affairs. Let us know your interests, whatever they are. We'll find you substantive and exciting internship options to help you on your way, so that whatever your professional interests may be, you'll get access to an internship that fits your specific needs.

Our internships give you the chance to work almost full time, allowing you to feel like a member of the staff at your office. You may assist attorneys during a trial, evaluate capital markets, help in radio or television production or attend congressional hearings. You could be conducting scientific research, advocating policy positions, writing a business plan or developing websites and databases.

At the end of it all, you'll not only be in a more secure position in today's marketplace but also much more confident about your own talents and clearer on your own direction.

How TWC matches you with the right internship

The Washington Center maintains ties with more than 1,000 organizations that provide high-quality internships in the Washington, D.C. area. Our experienced staff knows which placements offer the best internship experiences for your profile.

Your application will be referred to potential internship sites, usually between five and eight. You should stay in close contact with our Internship Management Team throughout the placement process, and you can use our online system to track where your application has been sent. You will likely have phone interviews with potential supervisors interested in your candidacy, and you will have the opportunity to accept or decline offers. The Internship Management Team will offer advice regarding specific options to help you make decisions. But you decide your final placement.

Final Internship Selection Process:

- Internship offer(s) are made.
- You select an internship.
- Your program advisor contacts you and prepares you for your arrival.

*J1 visa process begins for students attending schools outside the United States.
Build Your Professional Network

The Leadership Forum

The Washington Center produces not only future leaders in their professions, but also well-informed citizens who are engaged with their communities and their world. By taking part in our Leadership Forum, you will get the chance to listen to and engage with distinguished speakers, including cabinet members, ambassadors, journalists and members of Congress. You'll get direct access to the perspectives and experiences of important leaders from the business, nonprofit, media, government and diplomatic communities. You'll also have the opportunity to get engaged in the community around you and make a real difference. The Leadership Forum consists of the following five components:

The Alan K. Simpson-Norman Y. Mineta Leaders Series (SMLS)
On selected Monday afternoons you'll hear the perspectives and experiences of distinguished leaders from the business, nonprofit and government sectors as well as the diplomatic community.

Small Group Sessions
Throughout your Washington Center program, you'll benefit from activities—panels, site visits, briefings—especially designed for students with your professional interests.

Civic Engagement Project
You'll have an opportunity to be involved in projects where you learn and apply skills needed to make a positive difference in the community.

Roundtable on Philanthropy and Social Responsibility
This event highlights how the public and private sectors, individual philanthropists and non-governmental organizations work together to address pressing social challenges in the United States and around the globe.

Public Policy Dialogues on Capitol Hill (PPDCH)
You'll meet in a small group with a member of Congress or senior staff on Capitol Hill for a discussion of current issues.

The Portfolio
You will develop a portfolio, the components of which document, analyze and reflect on the internship experience. The final product provides prospective employers, as well as graduate and professional schools, with impressive evidence of what you have accomplished.

Course
U.S. and China in the 20th and 21st Centuries

"I teach Washington Center courses related to East Asian and Chinese history and Chinese-U.S. economic relations. The opportunity to work with Washington Center students from different backgrounds and schools has been a stimulating intellectual challenge for me over the years, and this fact, together with the ever-changing nature of the U.S. relationship with Asia, keeps the topics fresh and relevant. I am happy to say that I still hear from some of my former students now out making their own careers."

The Academic Course

An academic course is an integral part of your Washington Center experience. You'll be able to choose one from approximately 30 courses typically offered each semester or summer term.

These are serious academic courses that, combined with the internship, can help you earn credit at your home college or university. They have, in many cases, a direct relationship to the work you're doing throughout the week and range from politics, business and economics to international affairs and communications.

The courses, led by highly qualified faculty who are dedicated teachers, meet one night per week. They are grounded in traditional disciplines yet taught within the context of the wide array of resources available in Washington, D.C.

Frequently offered courses include:

American Politics and Public Policy
- Campaigning for a Cause: How Advocacy Groups Change the World
- Government and Business in the New Economic and Political Reality
- The American Presidency

Business, Management and Public Administration
- Global Markets and International Business Strategies
- From Ideas to Action: the Anatomy of Entrepreneurship

Communications
- Media and the Movies
- The Mass Media and National Politics: Explaining Washington to the Public

International Affairs and Foreign Policy
- U.S. Foreign Policy in the 21st Century: Dynamics of Change
- International Human Rights
- How Washington Engages the Arab Middle East

Law and Criminal Justice
- Philosophy of Law, the Supreme Court and the U.S. Constitutional Tradition
- White Collar Crime
- Introduction to Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure

Leadership
- Essentials for Aspiring Leaders
- Nonprofit Leadership and Management

Research
- Research and Writing Seminar

Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics
- Issues in Science Policy
- Forensic Psychology

Washington, D.C.-based courses
- Scandalous Washington: Uncovering D.C. History
- Black Broadway and Beyond: The African-American Experience in Washington, D.C.

Amisha Amin
Washington Center Resident Assistant (RA)

"When the students arrive each term, I ask a handful what their time in D.C. will do for them. Most guess that their internships will help further their studies and allow them to get real-world experience. As the semester comes to an end, however, I almost always find their answer has evolved beyond the academic and professional realms.

Whether it was going to a salsa or Bollywood night, attending a baseball game or picnic, volunteering at a shelter, talking with their RA or spending time with their roommates and fellow residents, the students have learned and shared perspectives, found commonalities, discovered new interests and formed strong relationships."

Live in Washington, D.C.

Guaranteed Housing

One of the most exciting aspects of coming to The Washington Center is where you will live. Whether or not you choose our housing, you will have ample opportunities to meet fellow interns, have fun and explore one of the world's liveliest and most engaging cities.

Although most interns choose to live in our housing, you are not required to do so. You should be aware, however, that some scholarships are contingent on using TWC housing."

The Washington Center Housing

The locations, layouts, and amenities vary, but units typically:

- are convenient to shops, restaurants and stores
- are fully furnished and equipped with air conditioning
- include fully equipped kitchens
- provide laundry facilities
- provide high-speed wireless Internet, cable and local phone access
- have 24-hour front desk coverage or are in secured-access buildings

For more information on TWC housing, please visit www.twc.edu/housing

The Washington Center housing

We don’t house you in dormitories. Instead, you’ll share an apartment with other Washington Center interns in either our Residential and Academic Facility near Capitol Hill or in one of a few carefully selected buildings in northern Virginia or suburban Maryland, all near a station on Washington’s Metro subway system.

Best of all, you will live with TWC interns and get to know people from not only the United States but also around the world. You will participate in a variety of social activities, trips and adventures with your colleagues, and at the end of it all, you will have created solid and lasting friendships that remain long after completing your internship with TWC.

You’ll be living independently, but you won’t be left totally on your own. Resident assistants (RAs), assigned to each building, are available if you need assistance.

With its staff of Student Services professionals and RAs assigned to each building, The Washington Center allows you to be independent but also be assured that support is available 24 hours a day in case of an emergency.
Explore the Nation’s Capital

At The Washington Center, you not only get a great work experience and a great learning experience, you also get a great life experience.

Washington, D.C. is a city with so much to offer—impressive architecture and monuments, incredible museums, world-class performances of theater, great nightlife, a rich international community and hundreds of restaurants offering cuisines from all over the world—and you’ll be able to experience it all from a true insider’s perspective.

Living in Washington, D.C. is like nothing else in the world. The city’s energy is remarkable, at both work and play. There’s so much to be accomplished and so much to see and do. It’s all at your doorstep as a Washington Center intern.
Things to do in D.C.

- World-famous monuments
- The lighting of the national tree during the winter
- The Smithsonian museums, including the National Air and Space Museum, National Gallery of Art and American History Museum (all free!)
- The Newseum, Spy Museum, United States Holocaust Memorial and art galleries
- World-class performances of theater, music and dance year-round at the Kennedy Center, Arena Stage and numerous other venues
- Cherry blossoms in the spring
- Concerts on the National Mall during the summer
Eligibility

The information below outlines TWC’s general requirements. Since your school may have additional requirements, we encourage you to contact your liaison before beginning the application process. You may also email us at info@twc.edu with any questions.

To be eligible, students must:
- Be at least 18 years old
- Attend an accredited college or university and have status as a sophomore or above during the term of their internship.
- Maintain a grade point average (GPA) of at least 2.75 on a 4.0 scale. Students with lower GPAs may be considered.
- Receive academic credit from their college or university for their participation in the internship program. The Washington Center does not grant credit.
- Have the approval of their campus liaison or a faculty sponsor if their institution does not have a campus liaison.

To be eligible, rising and first semester sophomores must:
- Participate in a phone interview as part of the admissions process.
- Have achieved sophomore standing as defined by their home institution by the start of the program.

Additional requirements for the Postgraduate Professional Development Program (PPDP)

To be eligible for the PPDP, students must:
- Have received their undergraduate degree within 18 months of the start of the program or be currently enrolled in graduate school.
- Not plan to receive credit facilitated by TWC for the program.

For more details on eligibility, please visit www.twc.edu/eligibility

Dates and Deadlines

The Washington Center offers programs during the spring, summer and fall. We recommend that you apply by the deadlines posted below, but we often consider applications submitted after these dates if space is available.

It is important to note that because some internship sites have early internal deadlines, you may need to submit your application before TWC’s official deadlines.

Step-by-Step Admissions Guide

TWC staff are available to assist you at every stage of the admissions process. Many of the application components you submit will be referred to prospective internship sites after you are accepted.

Discuss credit and cost arrangements with your liaison.
Consider timing (fall, spring or summer).
Talk to your parents.
Contact info@twc.edu with any questions.

Decision Making

Review the checklist of supporting documents for the application.
Identify letter of recommendation providers.
Request transcripts.
Confirm your liaison’s approval.

Preparation

Meet with your career services office to review your résumé.
Identify your fields of interest for internship.
Program Costs and Scholarships

Although The Washington Center charges a program fee and a housing fee (see table at right), the more relevant consideration is your "net" cost of attendance (the total you will owe your institution and/or The Washington Center). You may find that a semester or summer with TWC is comparable in cost to what you’d pay for the same term on campus.

Follow these steps to better understand how much it will cost for you to take advantage of The Washington Center experience:

1. Confirm your institution’s financial arrangement by speaking with your campus liaison and/or by contacting The Washington Center. Many affiliated institutions ensure that their students do not pay tuition on campus and TWC fees, but arrangements vary at each institution.

2. Explore whether your regular financial aid package can be applied toward TWC costs (or adjusted to account for any increased cost of attendance) and whether additional support is available at your college or university.

3. Review TWC awards listed online or contact us for more information. Approximately 75% of U.S. students receive financial support through a state grant or private scholarship to help offset their cost of participation. There are awards for civic engagement, professional achievement, diversity, and membership in honors programs or societies, among many others.

4. Apply. Your total cost may be impossible to determine until well after you are accepted, and sometimes may even be influenced by the internship offer that you select.

Please note, if you’re considering the Postgraduate Professional Development Program, you will not need to consult with your institution and will pay TWC’s fees directly.

To see the most up-to-date information on financial aid and eligibility requirements, please visit www.twc.edu/financial-aid.

As you explore off-campus experiences to complement your education, you might want to consider one of the following options:

Academic Seminars

Does the idea of building a professional network and interacting with nationally recognized figures like politicians, party activists, journalists, policy experts and campaign professionals appeal to you? Do you want to delve deep into the top issues of our time under the guidance of our supportive faculty mentors? If so, you should consider our upcoming one or two-week academic seminars. These fast-paced programs give you the opportunity to explore career paths and hear from national and international leaders.

If you choose to attend our Inside Washington 2013: Presidential Inauguration Seminar, you’ll either hear how President Obama’s second term might differ from the first, or you’ll be in D.C. as our government undergoes a peaceful transition of power. Either way, through site visits, panel discussions and special events you’ll learn about the incoming administration’s priorities, the confirmation of new cabinet members and the media’s portrayal of the presidential campaign, for example. This seminar is ideal for social science and communications majors.

Through our national security seminar, Top Secret: Challenges to National Security in a Global Society, you’ll explore the issues of U.S. national security in the context of the complex yet critical developments in the Middle East and other world hot spots. Perfect for international affairs and criminal justice majors, this seminar offers a behind-the-scenes perspective on how agencies such as the FBI and State Department work to protect U.S. interests at home and abroad. You’ll engage with experienced professionals and conduct site visits to a variety of think tanks and government agencies.

Although you do not need to earn credit to participate, most institutions award two to four credits for completion of the academic components of these seminars.

For more information on these and any other upcoming seminars, please visit: www.twc.edu/seminars

The Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars is a leading nonprofit educational institution headquartered in Washington, D.C. It provides undergraduates, graduate students and professionals from the United States and abroad with academic seminars on special topics and internship-centered academic terms. Offered primarily in Washington, D.C. and London, England, the internship programs consist of a substantive work experience tailored to the student’s interests, academic coursework, and civic and leadership programming.

The Washington Center enables students to gain the experience needed for entry-level employment and to prepare for lives of achievement, engagement and leadership; universities to extend their reach programmatically and geographically; organizations to connect with a new generation of talent; and its many supporters and alumni to shape the next generation of leaders.
