Scope and Content Note

The material in the Flora Ward Hinline Collection covers the period from the turn of the century to 1992 and documents Mrs. Hinline's activity as a Toledo impresario. Most of it consists of scrapbooks. The photographs are mainly autographed portraits of individuals whom Mrs. Hinline engaged as performers and speakers, but a number of others reflect her personal life and work.

The scrapbooks include the Town Hall Series of lectures; music and theater, mainly at the Paramount Theatre; and the Town Hall Theatre. Each scrapbook contains season programs and clippings thoroughly gleaned from all Toledo newspapers, with other items such as telegrams appearing occasionally. The form of the newspaper items changed little over the years. For the musical and dramatic performances, advertisements and announcements preceding the event were followed by reviews and gossip stories. The material in the Town Hall Series of lectures contains announcements and reports of the speakers' comments, but these latter events also provided news for the society page. Debutantes acted as ushers. The luncheons following the lecturers formed important occasions for society matrons to hobnob with celebrities.

The number of speakers and performers engaged by Mrs. Hinline is too large to mention here. Among others were Winston Churchill, H. G. Wells, Fritz Kreisler, and Eleanor Roosevelt. The autographed photographs in the collection comprise only a small minority of the total number of speakers and performers.

One group of photographs appears to represent a high school athletic event during the 1920s, possibly in Toledo. This is the only material in the collection outside its principal focus.
