Historical Sketch

In 1973 the first public school class for autistic children and adolescents opened in Toledo, Ohio, and Bettye Ruth Kay was the teacher. As she gained experience, it became increasingly apparent to her that her students would require specialized help well into adulthood and probably for the rest of their lives. But there were no programs for autistics beyond school age. Most were put into state institutions once they had passed through the public school system.

In 1977, the Autistic Community of Northwest Ohio formed and incorporated for the purpose of providing residential treatment and therapy for adults with autism. In 1979 the group, with State grant money, purchased a suitable property in Jerusalem Township, but was denied the necessary zoning to build. After overcoming this set-back, they purchased a second property in Whitehouse, Ohio, and construction began in 1981. The 80 acre farm got its name when Mrs. Kay and some other Board members were walking in a wooded area on the property and found a bittersweet vine. They immediately decided to call it "Bittersweet Farms," as it was representative of the life experience of families that deal with autism.

The main house was completed in February 1983. It was soon staffed and readied for occupancy. There were already three residents living on the property in the original one-story farmhouse, and in May more residents came for a trial visit. In June, nine autistic adults were admitted as residents and over the next 18 months the number climbed to 15. Additional buildings that were constructed around this time included the activities building and greenhouse.

Among the therapeutic activities used at Bittersweet Farms today are animal husbandry, horticultural therapy, woodworking, and gardening. The residents also host a yearly fundraising event called "Harvest Fest," as well as an annual plant sale in the spring, and some perform in the Farm's bell choir.

In 1990 Mr. Kay decided to retire to do some writing and consulting work. Later that year Charles Flowers was appointed as the new director. Victoria Obee-Hilty was the current director at the time the collection was acquired by the Canaday Center.

Biographical Sketch Bettye Ruth Kay

Bettye Ruth (Bryan) Kay, founder of Bittersweet Farms, was born in Birmingham, Alabama, on March 7, 1929. She attended Carson-Neuman College and the University of Minnesota where she completed her bachelor's degree in political science in 1951. It was here, at the University of Minnesota, that she met Marvin Michael Kay, who she married on April 6, 1953 at the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church in New Orleans, Louisiana.

The couple soon returned to the University of Minnesota where Bettye worked first as a secretary in the College of Education, and then as a graduate assistant in the Political Science Department. In July 1954 their first son, Michael, was born, followed by their daughter, Mandy in November 1955, and son Jonathan in November 1958. While raising her family Bettye was also very active in the Democratic Farm Labor Party, various peace organizations, and the Quakers as well as the International League of Peace and Freedom.

The couple spent the summers of 1958 and 1959 in Tuskegee, Alabama, where Mike taught history at the Tuskegee Institute. At that time Tuskegee was an all black school. The Kays were the only white family on campus, and were forced to live on campus due to a number of threats from outside the college community. Also, because of the Kays' involvement in desegregation and civil rights issues, the family required round-the-clock protection. Still, Bettye was vehement in her pursuit of civil rights. She spoke at black churches and to gatherings all over the area, and even helped implement an economic boycott of Tuskegee stores that demonstrated unfair treatment of blacks.

By 1959 Mike had found a job teaching at San Jose State University in California and Bettye had just about completed her master's degree in political science. In San Jose, Bettye remained active in the civil rights movement, the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom, Democratic party politics, and became a member of the Congress of Racial Equality. In March 1960 her fourth child, Daniel, was born, followed by twins Andrew and Nathaniel in March 1962. During this time the Kays became involved in the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

In 1962 the Kays moved to the University of Queensland at Brisbane, Australia. In the meantime, both of the twins, Andrew and Nathaniel, had become seriously ill, and shortly after their arrival in Australia Andrew died at 7 1/2 months old. Although she had five young children to care for, one of whom was ill, Bettye remained active in her peace and disarmament organizations, and also became involved in the Australian Peace Congress. Along with a friend, she also started a lucrative toy business that designed and marketed the highest quality, non-violent and educational toys.

The Kays moved back to the U.S. in 1966, where Mike took a teaching job at Alfred University in western New York. Bettye continued working on a master's degree in English Education and taught at Andover High School in Andover, New York. It was during this time that Nathaniel, the surviving twin, died. Shortly thereafter the Kays moved to West Chester State College in Pennsylvania, and it was there that they adopted their daughter, Ceri.

In 1970 Bettye earned her master's degree in special education from the University of Delaware, while teaching learning disabled children at the Vanguard School in Havorford,

Pennsylvania. Late in 1971 the Kays moved to Toledo, Ohio, where she taught special education. In Toledo, Bettye led the development of the Nathan Hale Community School, an after-school program of recreation and education for central city children. The school was forced to close in 1980 due to a decrease in funding.

In 1973 the Toledo Public School System opened its first class for autistic children, with Bettye Ruth as the teacher. She researched and studied current techniques and theories in the treatment of autism and decided to implement a holistic approach in her classroom. Her students pursued crafts, yoga, carpentry, horticulture, and many other things. She also integrated vigorous physical exercise and vocational programs into her classroom, and was constantly on the look out for new ideas and approaches.

Bettye also became very concerned for the long term care of her students. At that time, the vast majority of autistics were placed in state institutions once they passed through the public school system. Many of these institutions were intended for either mentally retarded or mentally disturbed individuals, and did nothing to address the special needs of the autistic.

This led Bettye to pursue the development of Bittersweet Farms. She began lobbying on every level of government from local to state until she got the funding needed to build the farm, and was able to purchase 80 acres near Whitehouse, Ohio. She then went to visit Somerset Court in England, a working farm where autistic people reside and learn to provide for themselves under supervision. She was so impressed that she decided to incorporate many of its approaches into Bittersweet Farms. She designed and implemented programs to address many of the needs of persons with autism, such as behavior management, physical education, language and communication skills, and vocational training.

Bettye Ruth Kay contributed thousands of hours to the endeavor that became Bittersweet Farms. On December 26, 1996, at the age of 67, she died from breast cancer that she had been fighting for ten years.

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains administrative files, correspondence, material on grants and fundraising, printed material, information on treatment and research, files on the historical development of the Farm, information about activities, events, and programming, miscellaneous matter, some of the residents' journals, and audiovisual material. Most of it is in good condition, however, there is occasional insect and rodent damage. The records were being stored in a pole barn on the property and were also subject to environmental hazards. The collection was donated to the Canaday Center by the trustees of Bittersweet Farms in February 2005.

The correspondence is scattered throughout the years from 1976-2001 and includes personal and professional material. A few noteworthy correspondents are represented in this series and are listed in the inventory. Interested researchers should note that additional correspondence is scattered throughout the other series.

Administrative files consist of Board of Trustees minutes; which include agendas, director reports, and minutes of various board committees. This series covers the years 1977-2004, and includes some undated material.

Grant and fundraising files contain grant applications and related correspondence. This series covers the years from 1979-1999 and includes some undated material.

Printed material contains various items such as newsletters, newspaper clippings and pamphlets. The series contains a variety of topics and is dated from 1979-2000 and includes some undated material.

Treatment and research files contain various topics and theories regarding the treatment of Autism. Of particular interest is the research on Vitamin B6 and Magnesium therapy, as well as the use of the diet pill, fenfluramine. Most of the material in this series is undated.

History files contain material about the start-up and history of the farm. It includes a file of biographical material on Betty Ruth Kay as well. This series spans the period from 1974-1979, and includes some undated material.

Farm grounds and buildings files contain a variety of material such as blueprints, site plans, and other miscellaneous papers regarding the land and structures on the farm. It covers the years from 1978-1988.

Miscellaneous subject files include 7 folders arranged alphabetically by subject. Subjects vary, and the material is undated.

Photographic material contains photographs of people, events, and miscellaneous objects and places, many of which are unidentified. It also contains various VHS videotapes including documentaries on the treatment of autism, and training and home videos.
