HEALTH PROFESSIONS
Living Learning Community
What does that mean, exactly?

First, it’s part of The University of Toledo mission. And second, it’s something that’s on your mind since you’re interested in health care.

So combine the two — UT’s mission and your educational goals — and you get an exciting place to live and learn at UT: The Health Professions Living Learning Community.

LIVING IN PRESIDENTS HALL

- Suite-style residence hall community with private bathrooms
- Conveniently located near Ottawa East Dining, Rocket Market Convenience Store and University Bookstore
- HPLLCC programs and activities will focus on developing the team skills you’ll need as a health care professional, providing academic support and putting you in touch with those already working in the field.

To be a part of the HPLLCC, you must be an admitted UT student and check the HPLLCC option on your housing application, which you can find at myut.utoledo.edu. Space is limited, so apply early after your admission. The program fee is $75 per semester.
Aside from hanging with future doctors, nurses, pharmacists, therapists and other health care professionals, what else can you expect at the HPLLC?

- Meet and greets: Talk to someone who’s already working in your future career field and gain insights in addition to what you learn in classes.

- Reach out: Volunteer in the community or plan an event with the rest of the HPLLC crew.

- Get help: Biology, chemistry and math are the courses you’ll need to earn your degree, and they’re also some of the most challenging. Study groups will help you excel in your courses.

- Connect with someone who’s been there, done that: Get paired with an upper-level UT student in your major who will be there with support and encouragement.

- Get FYI-ed: Participate in orientation events the first week of move-in and learn about campus resources to help you be successful.
