Master of Science in Nursing
Nurse Educator
The Master of Science in Nursing program at The University of Toledo is designed to build on the student's past learning, personal and professional goals and the insights and experiences gained through practice. The Nurse Educator major is targeted for baccalaureate graduates with clinical nursing experience who want to become nursing faculty or staff educators. Graduates are envisioned as teachers of undergraduate nursing students in the classroom and clinical setting. This major focuses on: curriculum development, teaching-learning processes, classroom and clinical teaching strategies, and evaluation principles. The Nurse Educator major offers full-time and part-time options. Students who are seeking full-time study should matriculate in the spring semester and can complete the Nurse Educator Curriculum online with campus experiences at selected times specified in the course schedule.

The University of Toledo (UT) College of Nursing is located on the UT Health Science Campus in a residential area of south Toledo. It is considered by many to be one of the most technologically advanced campuses in the nation.

The College of Nursing, established in 1971, is a major provider of undergraduate and graduate nursing education in northwest Ohio. The UT College of Nursing faculty, facilities and resources provide excellent opportunities for clinical nursing experiences, research, professional development and continuing nursing education.
