Plants are essential to the balance of nature and in people’s lives. They are the ultimate source of food and metabolic energy for nearly all animals, which cannot manufacture their own food. Besides foods, plant products vital to humans include wood and wood products, fibers, drugs, oils, latex, pigments, and resins. Coal and petroleum are fossil substances of plant origin. Thus plants provide people not only sustenance, but shelter, clothing, medicines, fuels , and the raw materials from which innumerable other products are made. Although plants of importance in the United States will be highlighted, an attempt will be made to provide a worldwide perspective of plant uses.
