Additional articles and chapters as noted below. PDF copies of these can be downloaded from the course website. Please note that the readings are subject to change.

Course Description and Objectives

The first purpose of this graduate level course will be to provide an introduction to diagnostic interviewing. The areas explored will include interview schedules, interview techniques, case conceptualization, assessment, diagnosing, report writing, case presentations, ethical and legal issues, and specialized topics pertinent to clinical interviewing and psychotherapy such as suicide risk, professional burnout, how to handle difficult clients, and empirically supported treatments. These areas will be covered through lectures, discussion, journal articles and book chapters, role plays, video segments, and clinical interviews with clients from the Psychology Clinic.

Second, this course will provide knowledge and experience to enhance your early professional development as a clinician. It will provide a segue to your more advanced practica. The course objectives will be met through readings, discussion, and case material (including videos).

Readings

Please be sure to read each of the articles before the class for which they are assigned and be prepared to discuss the articles during class. Please bring copies of the articles to class (either hard copies or PDFs on your laptop or tablet).

For each reading assigned for a particular week, please write one discussion question that you would like to discuss in class and email these to me before class. Not turning in these questions will negatively affect your discussion grade for the course.

Course Website

You can download PDF copies of assigned non-text readings at <https://sites.google.com/site/psych6390>. I will also upload copies of the course syllabus and class assignments to the website.

Each of you will be responsible for periodically leading discussions on particular topics. Moreover, each of you will complete at least one clinical interview/assessment and report and will present your case to the class. We will go over these requirements in detail during class. Your interviews and reports will be supervised by Dr. Hovey and Ms. Claycomb as well as in a group format during class.

Course Requirements, Grades

You will be expected to participate fully in class. For example, you are expected to show up for each class on time, be prepared for that day's topics, participate in discussions, and turn in assignments on time.

As mentioned above, in order to further develop your skills in leading discussions, you will lead class discussions on given readings.

You will be assigned a midterm assignment in which—in response to case material—you diagnose and write a mock case report on the individual.

Finally, you will be graded on your intake performance. This will include your performance on the actual interview, assessment, diagnosing, case conceptualization of the client, case presentation to the class, and intake report.

In sum, your course grade will be based on the following:

- 20% Class participation in general
- 35% Midterm assignment
- 45% Clinical intake performance

Further details about your class presentation will be discussed in class.

Because it is difficult, in a course of this nature, to determine the exact pace of the course, the schedule below is subject to change.
