Defined:
“Something that comes about as a consequence, effect, or conclusion of activity or action.”

“Something obtained, achieved, or brought about by calculation, investigation, and/or systematic activity.”

Instructions: Circle two (2) words that are most important in your understanding of this important word!

(p. 6)
1. The Trait School – Early efforts to understand leadership success focused on the leader’s personal traits. Traits are the distinguishing personal characteristics of a leader such as intelligence, honesty, self-confidence, and appearance, among others. This theory was based on the idea that some people are born with the traits that make them natural leaders (aka. The Great Man Theory of Leadership).

2. The Behavioral School – The behavioral approach to leadership is based on the supposition that individuals who adopts the appropriate behaviors of a leader can be effective in such a role. By observing and studying leadership behaviors and individual can learn to be an effective leader based on this theory. The research and theories in this school typically focus on task-oriented and people-oriented behaviors.

3. The Contingency/Situational School – The basic tenet of this focus is that leader behavior that is effective in some situations maybe ineffective in other situations. Thus, contingency or situational leadership takes the position that the leader’s behavior can and must be driven by the circumstances of each individual leadership role. Factors that influence each situation can include the leaders position power, the employees maturity, leader member relations and task structure, among others.
4. The Psychological/Emotional Intelligence School – Researchers have long agreed upon the importance of cognitive intelligence (IQ) as being critical to a leader’s success. Increasingly, leaders in researchers have come to the conclusion that emotional intelligence (EQ) is equally important to a leader’s success. Emotional intelligence refers to an individual’s ability to perceive, identify, understand, and successfully manage emotions in themselves and in their relationship with others.

5. The Results-Based School – This school works in reverse identifying first the desired goals and outcomes that leaders are seeking, and then identify the specific behaviors and practices that will enable them to move their groups forward to that end. It combines the behavior and contingency schools.

THINK: What contributions do each of these school make to our understanding of how to best lead others?

Man shoots self in foot 1-2-3 times

Princeton, W.VA—(AP) — A man accidentally shot himself in the right foot while cleaning each of three handguns, police said. The 38-year-old man was drinking beer Wednesday morning when he decided to clean his guns, according to a report filed by Mercer county deputy L. R. Catron.

His 32 caliber handgun went off but it “didn’t hurt” so he finished the pistol, then he began cleaning his 380-caliber pistol, which also, went off, said the report, which did not maim the man.

That bullet “stung a little, but not too bad,” Deputy Catron quoted the man as saying. The man finished cleaning the 380 caliber pistol and then pulled out his 357 handgun, only to shoot himself a third time.

The man finally called an ambulance. Deputy Catron said the man told him the 357 bullet “really hurt because {it} was a hollow point.” A dispatcher at the sheriff’s office today confirmed the man had been taken to Princeton Community Hospital, but she didn’t know his name.
