Comments/Notes:

New Certificate Proposal Narrative and Course Syllabi are in attachments.

Where to find specific doctoral requirements (those additional and/or different than requirements for the masters levels) can be found on the following pages of the following syllabi:

- CI 6400/8400 (Fall Semester) Trends in Literacy Acquisition (particular doctoral specifications for annotated bibliography on p. 6)
- CI 6430/8430 (Fall Semester) Diagnosis of Reading Disability (particular doctoral specifications on page 4 of syllabus)
- CI 6410/8410 (Spring Semester) Content Area Reading (particular doctoral specifications on pages 2 & 7 of syllabus)
- CI 6440/8440 (Spring Semester) Remediation Practicum (particular doctoral specifications on page 8 of syllabus)

Rationale:

Teachers in Ohio can add a K-12 "reading endorsement" to their teaching licenses to meet State mandates for working with learners at risk for literacy deficiencies.

The State requires coursework and exams for this endorsement. At UT, students who meet the prerequisites can, with 12 credit hours of graduate work, fulfill the coursework components of the endorsement. Currently, students who wish to take them often enroll as non-degree seeking graduate students. Others, especially those who need financial aid, enroll in a degree-seeking program, but discontinue their work after the reading endorsement coursework is completed, thereby not "completing" their program. With a certificate program, students will be eligible to apply for federal financial aid and also able to "complete" the certificate.

Upon completion, students could pursue a Masters Degree in Curriculum & Instruction or post-masters level students could pursue an Educational Specialist or Doctoral Degree.
