Disability Services

- It would be beneficial for students with/without disabilities if instructors would post a copy of their notes on Blackboard
- Students would pay more attention in class & grades would improve
- Students would not be distracted by writing down what the instructor is covering, while also trying to pay attention to their detailed points
- We could compare this to students texting and trying to drive a car, being unable to do both, especially students with disabilities
- The students are also able to create study guides from the notes
- With the click of a mouse, instructors could send the notes to Blackboard to the students before class
- Many students at other universities currently benefit from instructors posting their notes, and their GPAs have increased as a result
- Please consider this suggestion to your faculty constituencies, so that the students could start to benefit from this change
