Comments/Notes:

Rationale and Cross-listing:
The Department of Physiology believes that cross-listing the Readings in Cardiovascular Physiology will facilitate a better learning environment for both Master (KINE 6460) and Doctoral (KINE 3460) level students. Through readings, presentations, and discussions, students will be able to learn critical inquiry skills by observing and questioning each other as they interpret, critique, and present contemporary research literature in cardiovascular physiology. The master level student will learn by observing doctoral students who are more knowledgeable and more experienced while at the same time gaining experience and confidence by interacting with each other in a controlled, non-threatening environment. This important consideration when encouraging students to critically evaluate research findings and present what may be opposing views of thought.

Rationale:
Most graduate exercise science students sign up for KINE 6100 and KINE 6460 during the same semester. To eliminate the need for seminar request forms and to allow the students to register through the portal, the removal of KINE 6100 as a pre-req is requested.
