Impact on student learning:

The study of exercise physiology, including the understanding of physiological adaptations to both physical activity as well as acute and chronic diseases, involves the integrated responses between the cardiovascular, pulmonary, endocrine and musculoskeletal systems of the body. The undergraduate and graduate students in the Department of Kinesiology receive a considerable amount of information through lecture and demonstrations but the extent that they receive "hands-on" experiences is currently limited by the availability of equipment. The equipment we are requesting represents the cutting edge technology for assessing cardiovascular and metabolic responses to various exercise perturbations. The addition of the requested equipment to our available resources will provide our students with the opportunity to study integrated physiology as it is presented in lecture and gain valuable practical experience by being exposed to and receive experiential training on equipment that is used in many hospital and clinical settings.

- Equipment/Technology purchased with Tech Fee funds is for student use only. It cannot be filtered or "passed-down" to faculty or staff.
