Impact on student learning (attach additional pages if needed):

Many of the patients that occupational therapy and speech language pathologists treat have suffered head injury, stroke or cerebral palsy. One common symptom from the brain injury often associated with these diagnoses is difficulty in communicating through word processing. Specifically, these individuals often need to expend enormous amounts of energy just to type a simple sentence. Co-writer is a product that helps individuals with this problem by providing word prediction and word completion and is used in combination with any word processor. Other features include text to speech and the ability to manipulate the speech rate, change the voice, and add new words to the dictionary. It also can be graded to match the cognitive abilities of the patient. The department of occupational therapy currently has one copy, but this limits the accessibility for the students as they need to wait in line before having access to this program. This license request for 5 computers will facilitate the learning environment for all students. This software will be used by not only occupational therapy students, but also speech, language and pathology students. The switches will be used to access the computer and control the software function using the scanning feature of the software. This product will facilitate interdisciplinary learning as well.

- Equipment/Technology purchased with Tech Fee funds is for student use only. It cannot be filtered or "passed-down" to faculty or staff.
- All outdated or broken Tech Fee equipment/technology must be returned to the Tech Fee Committee for retirement or disposal.
- If you are submitting a request for computers, printers, scanners or software, you must consult with College Computing and the technology staff, to acquire a quote and to make sure that this equipment/software is supported by UT.
