Impact on student learning:

Technology changes quickly and young children are using technology earlier and earlier with each passing year. iPads are quickly replacing computers and textbooks in many classrooms and we want to make sure that our students can use the new technologies to impact their implementation of interventions. iPads allow our students to understand how specific applications can be used to in sync with research-based interventions to help students improve their academic and behavioral skills. The goal of the school psychology and counseling faculty will be to use the iPads in our courses to illustrate and introduce applications and how they can be used to implement interventions not only in our college classroom, but also in their practicums, internships, and eventually in their practice as certified school psychologists and counselors.

Two applications we are interested in purchasing are Behavior Tracker Pro and School Psychology Tools. Behavior Tracker Pro is an application specifically designed to support the behavioral treatment plans for children with autism and for monitoring students' behaviors. The program allows observers to identify and measure the antecedents and consequences of student behavior. It also enables interventions to be video recorded so it can be shared with other team members to ensure treatment integrity. This application costs $29.99 to purchase.

School Psychology Tools is an application that allows the user to plan interventions, evaluations, and re-evaluations using built in fully customizable templates. It can monitor the status of an individual student, or track deadlines for an entire caseload of students. This application also allows you to observe and report multiple behaviors, over multiple days using interval, duration, frequency, and ABC direct observation recordings. This application costs $34.99.
