Biographical / Historical

The University of Toledo's workforce development program was designed to help train and educate workforces so that they can improve the region they live and work in. This means that the University of Toledo cooperates with business leaders from communities to create new projects in their communities. In this collection, Beatty Anzaldúa served as a grant writer for both continuing education and workforce development. She worked heavily with Owens Corning and their facilities across the United States. She also worked closely with the Latino Alliance at the University of Toledo.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of grant reports, budgets, correspondences, miscellaneous documents, and files about leadership development. Training, grants, and incentives for Owens Corning is heavily documented; other topics included workforce development, the Latino Alliance and continuing education. Files are ordered alphabetically by folder title. If files share the same title, they are ordered by date/year. Most files are in paper format; however, there is one CD within the collection that may require access to a CD/DVD drive in order to view the files.
