A biography is an account of the special and important events in a person's life. It should not be confused with the similar sounding term bibliography, which is a listing of books and articles on a topic. Biographies may be brief and cover only basic information about a person's life such as dates of birth and death, education and vocation. A biography may also be very detailed, and cover the cultural background, outstanding accomplishments, and historical significance of an individual.

Biographical sources cover living and deceased persons, notable persons in particular countries, persons in specific occupations, celebrities, and civil and government leaders. It is helpful when searching for biographical information to know:

- The person's full name and correct spelling (for example: Smith, Smyth or Smythe)
- date of birth
- date of death (when applicable)
- nationality or country of residence
- occupation or profession

This guide will assist you in locating biographical information. It is organized in three sections:

1) Biographical master indexes, online and print, available at Carlson Library,
2) General suggestions on locating biographical information,
3) Reference books, available at Carlson Library.

Biographical Master Indexes

Please note: this is not a comprehensive list of master indexes in the Reference Collection. It is a selected list of titles that provide broad coverage. Other master indexes are available covering a variety of specific topics. Consult a reference librarian for assistance in locating these titles, if the ones listed below do not meet your needs.

Biography and Genealogy Master Index

General Suggestions

1) If you need basic facts about a person, e.g., "When was Napoleon born?", check general encyclopedias, such as The New Encyclopaedia Britannica (General Collection 4th Floor) or Britannica Online, Encyclopedia Americana (General Collection 4th Floor), and World Book Encyclopedia (General Collection 4th Floor). You might also want to check some foreign language encyclopedias, such as Grand Larousse in French (NWO Book Depository) or Brockhaus Enzyklopädie in German (General Collection 4th Floor).

2) If you are unable to find simple biographical information in general encyclopedias, or you need more information than provided, check one of the specialized biographical reference books below. These sources are arranged by the following broad subjects: General Sources, Multicultural, Women, Nationality, Authors, Business and Economics, Education, Entertainment and Sports, Music, Physical and Social Sciences, and Politicians and Leaders.

3) If you cannot find the person you are looking for, or cannot get enough information from a biographical reference book, check one of the biographical master indexes listed above. These guide you to books, periodical articles or other reference sources. Please note that sometimes you will be referred to another index.

4) For highly detailed information, search UT’s online library catalog for books on the person. Perform a subject search by typing the person's last name followed by their first name, e.g., Whitman, Walt. Execute the search and look for the subheading --Biography. The complete heading in this example is: Whitman, Walt, 1819-1892 --Biography. You can also use UTMOST to search for the titles of books and periodicals found in the biographical master indexes.

5) If UT does not own a title you want, you can use the OhioLINK Central Catalog to directly borrow books from other college libraries in Ohio. Books arrive within three to five business days. If the book you need is not available through OhioLINK, or if you need a periodical article that UT does not own, fill out an online interlibrary loan form. There is generally no charge for this service, but the library may need two to three weeks to get the item you need. For assistance with the library catalog, OhioLINK, or interlibrary loan forms, consult a reference librarian at the Information/Reference Desk.

6) It is important to remember that biographical information may not be available for all individuals. In these cases, information about an author can sometimes be found by checking the preface or introduction of an author's work for scholarly background and academic achievements. Perform an author search in the library catalog by typing in the last name followed by the first name.

Biographical Reference Books

Please note this is not a comprehensive list of titles in the Reference Collection. These titles were selected to provide broad, well balanced coverage within their categories. Some were chosen over similar titles because they are recognized standards, have unique features, such as portraits or contact information, or are more comprehensive. Consult a reference librarian for assistance in locating other titles, particularly those with very specific coverage, if the ones listed do not meet your needs.
