UT's first Day of Giving

President Sharon L. Gaber cut the cake to celebrate Founder's Day, marking the 145th anniversary of when UT was established with Jesup W. Scott's donation of 160 acres of land to found what was then the Toledo University of Arts and Trades. The University held its first Day of Giving, Rocket Forward: You Launch Lives, on Oct. 12 to carry on Scott's legacy by investing in UT's future. As of noon Friday, nearly 1,600 people contributed more than $425,000 to the University.

Olivia Olson, a third-year student majoring in biochemistry with a minor in art, held Cooper at the dog-petting station on Centennial Mall Thursday. She and many others donated a dollar for UT's first Day of Giving to visit a half dozen dogs as part of on-campus celebrations, which also included a photo booth, food trucks and raffles for prizes.

Swine time

Caitlin Bibler brought her 10-week mini-pig, Porkchop, to campus last week. Many were stopping to meet and visit Porkchop on the west side of Centennial Mall. "He loves all the attention he receives," Bibler, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, said. "He is a hit on campus."

UT to host updated Safe Place training for LGBTQ

By Ashley Diel

To make the campus climate more inclusive for LGBTQ faculty, staff and students, the Office of Multicultural Student Success will hold several Safe Place trainings.

At the newly redeveloped session, attendees will be introduced to LGBTQ-related terminology, learn about common issues and challenges faced by LGBTQ individuals, what it means to be an ally, and what resources are available.

"A Safe Place is a confidential place free from homophobia, transphobia, biphobia and heterosexism where people who identify in the LGBTQ community can feel welcome, safe and included," said Danielle Stamper, interim program coordinator in the Office of Multicultural Student Success.

Safe Places on campus can be identified by the Safe Place sticker for faculty and staff and buttons for students. These markers indicate that the individual or office has signed the Safe Place pledge and are an ally to the LGBTQ community.

"Safe Places are important because they allow LGBTQ individuals to be their complete self without the fear of being discriminated against because of their sexual orientation,

A ceremony was held Thursday to celebrate the $6 million renovation to Carlson Library. Cutting the ribbon were, from left, Student Government President Jimmy Russell; President Sharon L. Gaber; Beau Case, dean of University Libraries; and Jason Toth, associate vice president for facilities and construction. In addition to the new glass wall spanning the entire height of the building, the renovations include an expanded and landscaped concourse that greets guests when they enter the library, an added mezzanine area on the second floor, and the LTC Thomas J. Orlowski '65 Veterans Lounge. The multiyear renovation project was funded by state capital dollars. Ground was broken for the library in 1970, and it opened to students April 3, 1973.

Neal Katyal, former acting U.S. solicitor general and the lead attorney representing Hawaii in State of Hawaii, et al v. Trump, the travel ban case before the U.S. Supreme Court, was on campus last week to deliver the 17th Annual Maryse and Ramzy Mikhail Memorial Lecture. The title of his talk was "The President and the Courts in National Security Cases." Katyal, who has argued 34 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court, with 32 of them coming in the last eight years, said the threats and criticism he received when he took the travel ban case spurred him on. He is the Paul and Patricia Saunders Professor of National Security Law and director of the Institute for Constitutional Advocacy and Protection at Georgetown University Law Center. Katyal is also a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Hogan Lovells. His talk in the Law Center was presented by the College of Arts and Letters, the College of Law, and the Law and Social Thought Program, with WGTE as a media sponsor.

UT scientist to discuss importance of rivers for Lake Erie fish Oct. 19

By Christine Billau

As concerns about algal blooms, fish deaths and invasive Asian carp spawning are under the microscope in Lake Erie tributaries, an aquatic ecologist at The University of Toledo is highlighting the value of healthy rivers for fish in the Great Lakes.

Dr. Christine Mayer, professor in the UT Department of Environmental Sciences, is specifically targeting the Maumee, Sandusky and Detroit rivers in her lecture titled “Swimming Upstream: The Importance of Western Lake Erie’s Rivers to Fish Populations.”

The free, public event will take place Thursday, Oct. 19, at 7 p.m. at the UT Lake Erie Center, 6200 Bayshore Road in Oregon.

“The rivers and river mouths are a small area compared to the whole lake, but they hold some key habitats for fish, such as the type of environment required for reproduction,” Mayer said. “Some fish species, such as walleye, spawn both in the lake and in the rivers, but having river stocks helps increase the diversity of our ‘fish stock portfolio,’ just like your financial portfolio.”

While the river habitats are important to native fish, Mayer said there also is potential for newly invasive species, such as grass carp, to use rivers for spawning.

“Rivers are highly affected by human alteration of habitat and inputs from the land,” Mayer said. “It is important to try to envision what kinds of conservation or restoration are best suited for the three big rivers entering western Lake Erie to contribute the most benefit to Lake Erie fisheries. Each river has unique issues.”

Mayer’s talk is part of the UT Lake Erie Center’s Public Lecture Series.

Vaccinations available to prevent spread of influenza

The UT community has an opportunity to combat cold and flu season by getting an influenza vaccine this fall.

The 2017-18 quadrivalent vaccine contains weakened influenza virus from four strains: A/Michigan, A/Hong Kong (H3N2), B/Brisbane (Victoria lineage) and B/Phuket (B/Yamagata lineage). Flublok trivalent vaccine for those with egg allergy does not include the B/Phuket strain, according to Dr. Susan Batten, UT associate professor of nursing.

"The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend that everyone older than 6 months of age be vaccinated this year," Batten said. "The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices is urging all health-care providers to obtain vaccine in order to reduce influenza-related illness and absenteeism, as well as to reduce risk for high-risk patients who trust us for their care."

Walk-in clinics will be held on Health Science and Main campuses in October and November. Students in the Master of Science in Clinical Nursing Leader Program and the Bachelor of Science in Nursing Program will administer the vaccines.

The influenza vaccine is free and available to all UT employees and students with valid IDs.

UTMC faculty, staff, students and volunteers are required to receive the influenza vaccination. Employees have three options for fulfilling this requirement:

- Complete the online consent form and receive the vaccination on campus by Friday, Dec. 1.
- Upload documentation to prove the vaccination was received at their doctor's office or other clinic.
- Request and receive approval for an exemption. Exemption requests are available online and must be submitted for review no later than Wednesday, Nov. 15. Individuals who are not approved for an exemption or those who do not meet the deadline will be required to receive the vaccination.

To upload documentation or access the consent form or exemption request, visit influenza.utoledo.edu. A link to this site also is available under the UT Community tab on the myUT portal. Additional questions related to the influenza vaccination requirement should be addressed to the appropriate UTMC department supervisor.

International scholar to discuss humanities, new book

Dr. Michael Bérubé, the Edwin Erle Sparks Professor of Literature at Pennsylvania State University, will visit The University of Toledo this week for two events and to work with students.

Bérubé
McQuade Law Auditorium.

Bérubé argues there is no widely accepted public rationale for new research in the humanities. He challenges the notion that this kind of research is finding a secure institutional home in North American academe, despite his own lifelong commitment to the defense of the humanities and the university institutions making such work possible — like the book, “The Humanities, Higher Education and Academic Freedom: Three Necessary Arguments,” co-written with Janet Ruth (2015). He discusses the role of humanities centers and institutes in fostering interdisciplinary humanities research.

His free, public talk will be followed by a reception in the Law Center Shumaker, Loop & Kendrick Lounge.

On Friday, Oct. 20, Bérubé will lead a free, public brown-bag conversation about his book, “The Secret Life of Stories: From Don Quixote to Harry Potter, How Understanding Intellectual Disability Transforms the Way We Read” (2016). The event will start at noon in Carlson Library Room 1005.

Scholars are calling the book a radical and critical contribution to American studies, literary studies and disability studies.

Twenty-five copies of the book will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis, thanks to the Disability Studies Program; the Department of English Language and Literature; the Department of Art; the School of Interdisciplinary Studies; and the Roger Ray Institute for the Humanities in the College of Arts and Letters.

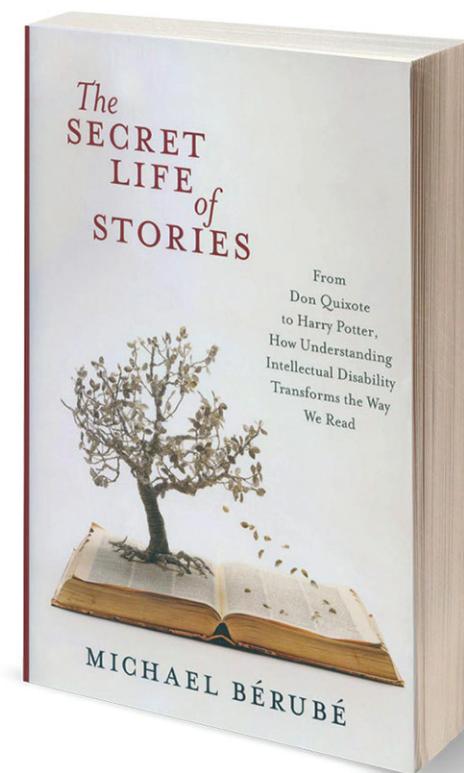

Since 2001, Bérubé has taught at Penn State, where he served as director of the Institute for the Arts and Humanities from 2010 to 2017 and was president of the Modern Language Association from 2012 to 2013. Prior to that, he taught 12 years at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

He is the author of more than a dozen books, including the award-winning biography, memoir and philosophical inquiry into disability issues, “Life as We Know It: A Father, A Family and an Exceptional Child” (1998), which he followed up with “Life as Jamie Knows It: An Exceptional Child Grows Up” (2016), which are about his son who has Down syndrome. Other titles include “Rhetorical Occasions: Essays on Humans and the Humanities” (2006) and “What’s Liberal About the Liberal Arts? Classroom Politics and ‘Bias’ in Higher Education” (2006). He also has a blog at michaelberube.com.

During his two-day visit, Bérubé will tour UT’s Toledo Museum of Art Campus and view an exhibition titled “One Way or Another,” which features works by adults with special needs. He also will be a guest instructor for two classes, one for the Political Science and Public Administration Department, and one for the English Language and Literature Department. In addition, he will give an interview to writers for The Mill, a literary magazine edited by UT graduate students in English.

Bérubé was on campus in 2009 and delivered the Richard M. Summers Memorial Lecture.

of Bérubé’s visit are the Roger Ray Institute for the Humanities; the College of Arts and Letters; the School of Interdisciplinary Studies; the School of Visual and Performing Arts; the Department of English Language and Literature; the Disability Studies Program; and the Department of Art.

Stepping up to fight suicide

The UT Psychology Department and the UT chapter of Psi Chi participated in the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention’s Out of the Darkness Walk Oct. 7, and a few members and friends posed for a photo before the event. While raising awareness, the University team also raised $2,135, the second highest total in the country, that will go to the foundation’s research. The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention is the leading national not-for-profit organization dedicated to understanding and preventing suicide through research, education and advocacy, and to reaching out to people with mental disorders and those impacted by suicide.

Both are legendary animals found in Chinese folklore and mythology," Metzoian, who won a $25 gift card and a mini-panda, wrote about the picture. All photos submitted for the contest were on display during the Chinese Mid-Autumn Festival, where attendees voted on their favorites. The contest was sponsored by the UT Confucius Institute.

She also took second or third in six other events at MAC Championship Meets. She is the only UT women's swimmer ever to qualify for the NCAA Championship in three different events. At the conclusion of her career, Dyer held more than 20 UT, MAC and various pool records. A two-time team captain, Dyer was named MAC Swimmer of the Year and UT Female Athlete of the Year in 2009-10. She made an immediate impact for the Rockets as a freshman, earning second-team All-MAC honors and breaking the UT record in the 1000 freestyle. As a sophomore, Dyer earned first-team All-MAC recognition and set the MAC record in the 500 freestyle at the MAC Championship Meet, the first of her 10 career MAC golds. She also finished second in the 1650 freestyle and fifth in the 200 free. As a junior in 2010, Dyer won MAC titles in the 200 free, 500 free, 1650 free, 400 free relay and 800 free relay. She earned first-team All-MAC and MAC Swimmer of the Year honors, leading UT to its first-ever MAC Championship crown. That year she set the MAC record in the 500 freestyle with a time of 4:44.23, the second-longest current league record for any event. Dyer made first-team All-MAC one last time as a senior, taking four MAC titles in the 200 free, 500 free, 400 free relay and 800 free relay. She qualified and competed at the NCAA Championship Meet in the 200 free, 500 free and the mile. She placed 11th in the nation in the 800 free, the highest finish in UT history.

Dyer

DeJuan Goulde, football, 1997-2000.

Goulde was a three-time All-MAC defensive lineman, earning first-team honors in 1999 and 2000 and second-team recognition in 1998. As a sophomore in 1998, he had six sacks and 16 tackles for loss, helping lead Toledo to a MAC West Division title. In 1999, Goulde had 84 tackles, 10 sacks and 17 tackles for loss. His 10 sacks ranked him tied for second in the MAC, while his 17 tackles for loss ranked eighth. In 2000, Goulde was a force on one of the best defenses in school history. The 10-1 Rockets allowed just 81.5 yards rushing per game that season and shut out three opponents. Goulde had 73 tackles, nine sacks and 17 tackles for loss. He was named third-team All-America by the Football News, and he was runner-up for MAC Defensive Player of the Year. Goulde ranks third all-time on UT's career list in tackles for loss (47) and tied for third in sacks (25).

Meet. He also qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 220, the first UT athlete to make it to the NCAAs. In 1974, Friedman won the 100- and 220-meter dashes, and anchored the 440-yard relay MAC title team that set the league record. He became the first UT runner to win more than one event at the MAC Championship Meet. That 440 relay team finished second at the Central Collegiate Championships, barely losing to eventual NCAA Champ Illinois. Friedman was runner-up in the 220 to 1964 U.S. Olympian Trenton Jackson of Illinois. He also qualified for and ran in the 1964 NCAA Championships in the 100 meters and 200 meters (21.6). # Academic Affiliation investment: Labs receive new equipment

By Jen Sorgenfrei

Biomedical researchers at The University of Toledo are working with substantially greater support thanks to a significant investment in new laboratory equipment from ProMedica through the Academic Affiliation with the College of Medicine and Life Sciences.

University and ProMedica leaders joined faculty and staff Oct. 11 for tours of renovated laboratories on Health Science Campus and to celebrate the investment. The new state-of-the-art equipment encompasses 11 instruments across three labs in the Health Education and the Block Health Sciences buildings.

"The new technologies will equip our expert researchers with the tools they need to advance knowledge and develop better therapies to treat our loved ones," UT President Sharon L. Gaber said. "These state-of-the-art research facilities also are critical in attracting and retaining the talent needed to elevate Toledo as a leading academic medical community."

Signed in 2015, two major goals of the Academic Affiliation are to recruit and retain top talent to the region and to grow biomedical research. The University additionally seeks to increase external research funding to support ongoing discovery. Leaders of both institutions believe that first-class research capabilities will support both goals.

"We should invest in the capabilities of the people who are here today, but also plan for the people we want to attract in the future," Randy Oostra, president and chief executive officer of ProMedica, said. "We're very serious about changing the trajectory of our two organizations by working together."

Dr. William Maltese, professor and McMaster Endowed Chair of Biochemistry and Cancer Biology, expressed appreciation on behalf of University researchers for the investment, and assured University and ProMedica leaders that the new equipment was selected after careful consideration of the resources needed to support and grow biomedical research at UT.

Many of the new instruments replace antiquated equipment with updated techniques and newer technology, and high-throughput systems improve speed and efficiency by producing results and analysis in just days for tests that previously took months. The investment additionally includes instruments new to the University, providing technology and capabilities previously unavailable in the research enterprise.

"This investment from ProMedica in our research facilities is matching words with deeds for progress in the Toledo community," Dr. Christopher Cooper, executive vice president for clinical affairs and dean of the College of Medicine and Life Sciences, said. "It's a tangible example of what we set out to do with the [Academic] Affiliation."

The University of Toledo recently recognized three local individuals for their work and dedication to the field of emergency medicine at the seventh annual Emergency Medicine Wall of Honor Induction Ceremony.

A reception was held Oct. 3 in the Jacobs Interprofessional Immersive Simulation Center on Health Science Campus. UT President Sharon L. Gaber, Dr. Christopher Cooper, executive vice president for clinical affairs and dean of the College of Medicine and Life Sciences, and Dr. Kristopher Brickman, professor and chair of the Department of Emergency Medicine, spoke at the event.

"This ceremony celebrates individuals who have demonstrated a passion for the field and epitomize what emergency medicine is all about," Brickman said. "Through their leadership and commitment, each has helped advance the field to the next level."

The Emergency Medicine Wall of Honor, made possible through funding from IPI Insta-Plak Inc. and The Blade, was established in 2011 to celebrate the achievements of those who committed to service within the emergency medicine community.

Each year, nominations are submitted by a committee of community stakeholders and reviewed by a multidisciplinary selection committee.

This year's honorees were:

- Dr. Todd Brookens, emergency medicine physician. Considered a favorite among hospital staff at ProMedica Toledo Hospital for his approachability, enthusiasm to teach and outgoing nature, Brookens earned his doctorate of medicine at Kansas City University of Medicine and Biosciences and completed his internship and residency in emergency medicine at Mercy St. Vincent Medical Center in Toledo. The Emergency Department physician also is the associate medical director of the ProMedica Transportation Network and medical director for many EMS agencies in the northwest Ohio region.

- Marja Soikkeli-Dooner, registered nurse. Soikkeli-Dooner developed extensive experience in nursing and administration throughout her career at Mercy St. Vincent and ProMedica Toledo hospitals, where she was director of emergency services. Prior to her retirement, Soikkeli-Dooner served as the vice president and chief nursing officer at ProMedica Wildwood Orthopaedic and Spine Hospital. She earned her associate's degree in nursing from Pen Valley Community College in Kansas City, Mo., followed by a bachelor's degree in nursing and a master's in liberal studies at UT. She is regarded as an exceptional mentor who has helped mold many of the great leaders in emergency medicine.

Hess

- Heidi Hess, emergency medical technician. Hess served 22 years in the Springfield Township Fire Department, before retiring as captain of the EMS Department in 2014. She began her career in 1978 as an EMT-basic, and by 1981 had earned her paramedic certificate licensure. Hess played an integral role in EMS education by providing training to thousands of firefighters, EMTs, nurses and physicians throughout her career.
