About UToledo Online

History

Toledo University of Arts & Trades, 1872-1884

On October 12, 1872, Jesup Wakeman Scott founded The University of Toledo as a private arts and trades school known as Toledo University of Arts and Trades, offering painting and architectural drawing as its only subjects. Scott, the editor for The Toledo Blade newspaper from 1844 to 1847, was a public-spirited Toledan who felt the city should have a university to train young people for responsible positions in the growing community. Scott's dream led him to endow 160-acres of land, which later became Scott Park Campus. Scott intended that the income from the property be supplemented with funds from the city to establish a university, but in 1874, the city had no money to contribute. Jesup Scott died in 1874. On January 14, 1875, the University opened in the basement of the half-finished Unitarian Church, known as Raymond Hall on the corner of Adams and 10th Street. Since the University opened without support from the city, it could only fund one teacher and two or three courses for the 26 students. The school was forced to close in 1878 due to a lack of funds. The University was only in existence 3 out of the 16 years after its incorporation. In 1883, Toledo became interested in the new manual training schools for high school students and the Board of Directors proposed that the University cooperate with the city in offering practical courses.

Toledo Manual Training School, 1884-1914

On January 8, 1884, the assets of the university were turned over to the City of Toledo establishing it as a municipal school. The city accepted the land from the Scott trust and levied a tax to support the University, which reopened using two rooms in Central Catholic High School in the fall of 1884 as the Toledo Manual Training School. The city council stipulated, "The first department of such University shall be designated as The Manual Training School, and shall be devoted to instruction in the Practical Arts and Trades." It is interesting to note that John Dowd was the first man to give tangible subsistence to the infant University. Dowd served as superintendent of Toledo Public Schools (1880 – 1886) as well as a member of the Board of Directors. He is the one who offered the University a room in Central Catholic High School. Dowd later became the fourth President of the University. In 1885, the classes moved to a new building known as the Scott Manual Training School Annex to the Central High School, and in compliance with the terms of the Scott trust, the Manual Training School admitted girls in 1886. The courses included sketching and technical drawing, woodworking, metalworking, cooking, and housekeeping. Toledoans believed the school to be one of the first and best of its kind in the nation. In 1904, it became affiliated with the Toledo Medical College, a fledgling institution in its own right.

Toledo University, 1914-1967

While the Medical College was forced to close its doors in 1914 because it could not meet new physician licensing standards, the University gained a College of Pharmacy from the brief relationship. The University's curriculum began to move away from a secondary school focus to become a baccalaureate degree-granting institution. The formal opening of the new University building on the corner of 11th and Illinois Street was on January 30, 1914. The University then changed its name to Toledo University. By the fall of 1922, the decision had been made to move day classes from the Illinois Street Building to the Scott farm tract on Nebraska Avenue. This brick building, later designated as the Science Building, had been constructed by the U.S. Government during World War I for the purpose of training engineers in an automobile mechanics training facility. After the Toledo voters passed a bond levy in 1928, the main campus was moved north to the land located on Bancroft Street, with University Hall being the first building constructed in 1931.

The University of Toledo, 1967-Present

On July 1, 1967, The University was given the status of a state-funded university by the Ohio General Assembly and became known as The University of Toledo. The University of Toledo grew to house eight colleges, a student population of 20,000, and four campuses on more than 450 acres of land. On July 1, 2006, The University of Toledo merged with the Medical University of Ohio. The newly merged institution remained known as The University of Toledo.

Getting Started

Class Attendance Policy

In order to maximize our students’ chances of success in their educational endeavors, and to comply with relevant federal regulations governing the management of Title IV financial aid funding, the University is responsible for verifying that students begin attending their registered classes. This University-wide policy may differ from college/program/course-specific attendance policies, which may be more stringent, in such cases the college-specific policy would govern. Confirmation that all students began attending and participated in all courses for which they enrolled is required to be reported by faculty on the 15th day of each academic semester. 34 CFR 668.22(l)(7) defines academic attendance and attendance at an academically related activity as any activity that includes, but is not limited to:

- Physically attending a class where there is an opportunity for direct interaction between the instructor and students;
- Submitting an academic assignment;
- Taking an exam, an interactive tutorial, or computer-assisted instruction;
- Attending a study group assigned by the school;
- Participating in an online discussion about academic matters; and
- Initiating contact with a faculty member to ask a question about the academic subject studied in the course.

The definition of academic attendance and academically related activity does not include activities where a student may be present, but not academically engaged, such as:

- Logging into an online class without active participation
- Participating in a student-organized study group;
- Participating in academic counseling or advising
- Living in institutional housing; or
- Participating in the school’s meal plan.

Proctored Testing

Proctored or in-person, supervised testing is required by some UToledo instructors and/or programs for online courses. Please do not assume that because the course is online that the test will be online or that the accommodation for testing will be made at the student’s location. It is the student’s responsibility to confirm online course testing requirements at the start of each term. Before proceeding, confirm that proctored testing is required for your class and that the instructor has initiated the process with Testing Services. Students in online courses with instructor permitted off-site proctored testing need to complete the online form within the first three weeks of each semester. Students testing outside of the United States will use ProctorU, a third-party online proctor service. Please note that international locations will be verified before your test date. Students are responsible for all proctored testing fees. For forms, proctor guidelines, and additional information, please visit Proctored Testing or email Testing Services at testcenter.mc@utoledo.edu.

For more information, please visit the proctored testing webpage

Rockets Email

All new students should begin checking their Rockets email account daily for official University correspondence. Many students download the Outlook app to their smartphones to stay connected, and we recommend you take this step, too!

To access your Rockets email, please visit the email webpage

Student Expectations

Online students have many of the same expectations as our campus-based students. It is expected that you log into your courses regularly, participate in discussions, read the syllabus for each of your courses, and actively engage in assignments and homework. Many times online courses can take more time and dedication than campus-based courses. Successful online students:

- Are self-starters and have the maturity and motivation to work independently.
- Use time wisely, are organized, are self-directed, and willing to use new modes of communication and learning.
- Are willing to put in the necessary time, read the text carefully, and actively participate in online class assignments and activities.
- Remain attentive and engaged with your fellow students and instructors while maintaining a positive learning environment for everyone.
- Practice good time management skills.

Technology Requirements for Online Learners

Students should always read the course syllabus carefully, or contact the instructor, for specific course requirements. Students will need to have access to a properly functioning computer and high-speed Internet access throughout the semester. The rental/purchase, installation, and maintenance of required computer hardware and software is the responsibility of the student. Student computers need to be capable of running the latest versions of plug-ins, recent software, and must have the necessary tools to be kept free of viruses and spyware. If using a public library or other public access computer, students should check to ensure they will have access for the length of time required to complete their tasks and tests.

  Students may access Degree Audit Reports by logging into their myUT Portal and accessing the degree audit option on the student tab.
